RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

National Taiwan Normal University	Taipei, Taiwan
Research assistant; Advisor: Dr. Huichen S. Hsiao	Aug 2021 – Present
• Published four papers and presented at conferences across eight countries. • Collaborated on establishing and correcting experimental designs, resulting in improved methodological rigor and more accurate research outcomes. • Participated in the revision of articles, enhancing the coherence of the meaning and the accuracy of the data.

Language and Culture: An Alternative Perspective on Spatiotemporal Mapping Bias and Temporal Focus Hypothesis Issues

- Designed a survey aimed toward native Chinese speakers to investigate the interval and the distribution of different approximators.
- Join the team to help with data analysis and article writing, especially in literature review and discussion.
- Exploring the differences in the corpus and Chinese textbooks between the ‘yihou’, ‘houlai’ and ‘ranhou.’

Empirical Study on Semantic Configurational Harmony, Pragmatic Implicatures, and Negative Strengthening of Scalars in Mandarin.

- Designed a survey aimed toward native Chinese speakers to investigate whether the scale and polarity of different Mandarin adjectives affect the semantic acceptability of these adverbs in the "degree adverb- adjectives " constructions.
- Analyzed the mutual information score (MI-score) of "degree adverb-adjective" pairs to investigate the effects of boundedness and ordering on configurational harmony in Chinese.
- The results indicate that not only do semantic rules of configuration in Chinese affect configurational harmony, but context is also an important factor affecting configurations. Context shifts the standard of the sentence's predicate and affects the scales of adjectives.

Corpus-based and CLS-oriented Empirical Approaches on Ditransitive Constructions in Mandarin.

- Analyzed tens of thousands of corpus data items to investigate the performance of Japanese learners of Chinese as a Second Language (CSL) and native Chinese speakers using the verb "SONG" (give).
- Designed an experiment that includes three tasks to explore how constructions containing "SONG" (give) interact with verb meanings, differences in the distribution of constructions influenced by information structure, and whether "SONG" (give) behaves similarly to other ditransitive verbs.

National Cheng Kung University

Tainan, Taiwan

Research assistant; Advisor: Dr. Sung-Lin Chen

Aug 2019 –July 2021

- Assisted in analyzing 400 language materials comprising of student compositions for the project "Grammatical Variations of World Chinese: Empirical Studies Based on Student Writings" at Nanyang Technological University, Singapore.
- Drafted two National Science Council (NSC) Research Project concluding reports.

Pragmatic Analysis and Intercultural Communication Study of Chinese Textbooks for Children.

- Counted imagery and language data from eight textbooks.
- Analyzed the pragmatic content, identifying core similarities and differences in intercultural communication. This helped to understand the communication strategies and expressions of children as portrayed in the textbooks.

On the Theme Selection, Cultural Construction and Pragmatic Narration of Chinese Textbooks for Children.

Analyzed the pragmatic imagery and language data from four textbooks.

Aimed to examine the content of teaching materials from the perspectives of various pragmatic acts and intercultural communication.
